A.1.1 What will happen if you ping a non-existent host that doesn't reply ICMP requests? For example, do the following command in the xterm for h3: ping -c1 10.0.0.9.

Answer:

H3 will initially broadcast ARP requests for the desired IP address in hopes of getting a reply containing the associated MAC address. In the case that we try to ping 10.0.0.9, h3 will broadcast an ARP request for 10.0.0.9 that none of the other hosts will respond to. Ping has a default ARP retry of 3 times, which is set at a default time out of 1 second. Thus after not receiving any reply after 3 retries, Ping discards the queued ICMP packets and returns Destination Host Unreachable.

A.1.2 Modify the firewall (firewall.py) to block trac with source MAC address 00:00:00:00:00:00:00:00 and destination MAC address 00:00:00:00:00:00:00.

To show the result, you can use the command pingall and copy the output to your report. (Hint 1: this only takes a few lines of code. Hint 2: if you did not specify any action in a OpenFlow message, then matching packets will be dropped.)
